Greedy

Motivations

- Loves a good challenge
- Add experience to her CV
- Have a different university experience
- Get to know the different culture and people
- Improve her english
- Make new friends
- Learn in the course units

Frustrations

- Doesn't like to invest time in a task for it to fail
- Hates when everybody around speaks a different language
- She's doing some 2nd year classes, making it difficult to get a fixed group

Profile

Miriam is an 21 years old informatics engineering student, currently in the third year of Bachelor's degree who lives in Slovakia with her parents. She has never worked since she never had the need to do so. With this pretty linear life going on, she wanted to do something different in this new academic year.

One day, Miriam decided to have an international experience. So she enrolled in the ERASMUS program. Some days later she just found out that she was going to FEUP, Portugal.

After hours of searching for a residence, Miriam found a nice house close to the university and asked her parents to pay for it. The house has 3 rooms and now she want to rent 2 of them to students. Her parents told her that she could keep the money earned from the rent as "pocket money" since they clearly don't need it.
